

Coffee Break

Question on Software or Operating system.

Send a Web Page by Email.

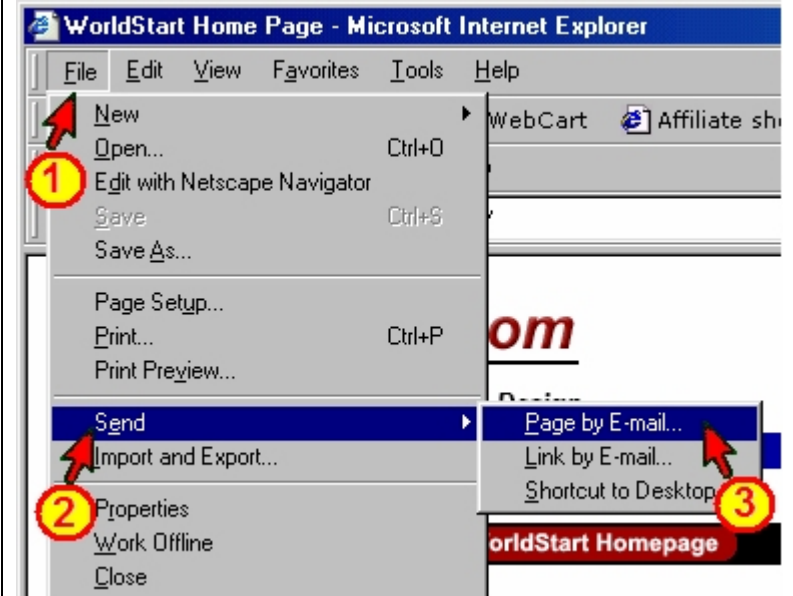

Have you ever wanted to show a friend the web page you were viewing? Maybe you felt the need to share a cool recipe you just discovered or maybe it's a site that required many steps to get there.

OK you could just include the web address in your email letter. But the page is important to you and your friend may not click on the link.

To make sure he views the site, send him the web page.

It's easy, using Internet Explorer. Here's how to send a web page to a friend:

Using Internet Explorer:

Outlook Express will now open and the page you were just looking at will be made into an e-mail message. All you need to do is fill in the recipient's address and send it off. To test this, use your own address and send it to yourself.

Final Note:

Your friend will need an HTML compatible e-mail client to actually be able to view the page. Most e-mail programs are HTML capable.
